Choosing the Right Timber Floor for your Home

Timber floors look great in any home, but sometimes customers have a different expectation of how their floor will look or perform after it has been installed. It is important to know how a timber floor will function over time. Whilst bosch timber floors are famous for delivering stunning solid timber floors, we also offer other great timber floor solutions that maybe more practical for your individual requirements.

Solid Timber Flooring

Every solid timber floor is unique as timber is a natural product with variations in colour, size, and grades. At bosch timber floors we discuss the different options with you and ensure our showroom displays provide good representations. Customers are welcome at our warehouse to inspect timber before making a final decision. As timber floors can be subject to some movement in changing climatic environments, their appearance can change slightly at different times of the year. We understand these possibilities and ensure the right precautions are taken to reduce expansion and contraction of your solid timber. bosch timber floors makes sure that timber is stored, acclimatised and installed using recognised industry procedures to minimise timber movement.

bosch timber floors sources timber from reputable mills throughout Australia, and specialises in the supply of all Australian timber species including, Blackbutt, Spotted Gum, Jarrah, Marri, Karri, Brushbox, Tallow wood, Ironbark, Sydney Blue Gum and more.

Engineered Timber Flooring

is fast becoming a great alternative to solid timber. Essentially an engineered timber floor is a genuine timber floor made up of several cross laminated layers. This provides excellent stability for the timber floor as the cross-laminated formation significantly reduces expansion and contraction of the boards in the changing climatic environments.

Engineered Timber Floors traditionally have a 3mm top wear layer. This provides the ability for the timber floor to be re-sanded once or twice after its initial installation. New variations of engineered timber floors are now available including a product with a 0.6mm wear layer making the product less expensive. Also available is the luxurious Straightwood with a 5mm wear layer. Straightwood can be re-sanded as many times as solid timber with an added advantage of superior stability. Available in the wider 130mm and 180mm boards, Straightwood is the perfect balance between engineered and solid timber.

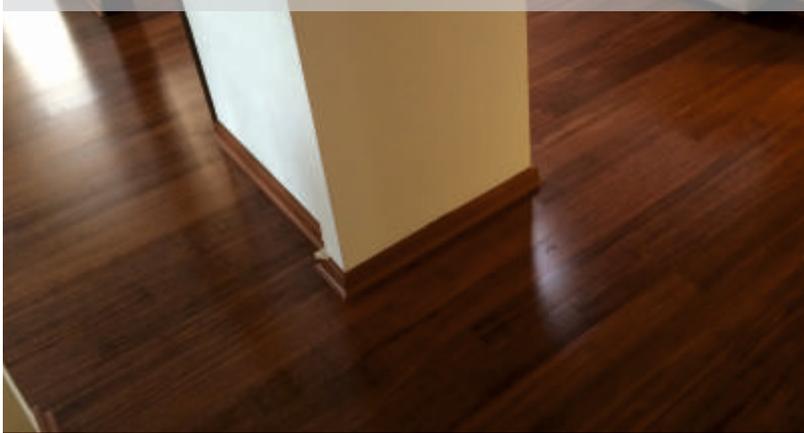

Parquetry

Flooring

Parquetry flooring is solid timber that allows you the creativity to design a floor that becomes a feature in your home. From simple brick layouts to herring bone and complex chevron designs, the options are boundless. bosch timber floors can work with you to create your very own master piece.

Bamboo

Flooring

Bamboo flooring has evolved in recent years into a very functional and hard wearing product. It is quick and easy to install and with an increasing range of colours and styles, provides a wide range of options to suit many home styles.

Laminate

Flooring

Laminate flooring provides the look of a timber floor with improved impact and scratch resistance. Digital technology has evolved to a level that produces wonderful timber styled laminate floors for your home that can be difficult to distinguish from solid timber at a much more affordable price.

Vinyl Plank

Flooring

bosch timber floors is excited to introduce vinyl plank flooring to its range. The timber look of vinyl plank is realistic and provides the added bonus of being soft and quiet underfoot.

With it's resistance to moisture, vinyl plank flooring is suitable for use in wet areas such as laundries and bathrooms.

At bosch timber floors we help you through the whole process

We take pride in working with you to understand your preferences allowing a floor selection that looks stunning whilst providing excellent value for money.

When you have decided on the type of timber floor you prefer, we will assist you with:

- your preferred installation method for your floor type (floating, direct stick, plank on ply)
- your preferred coating system (waterborne, solvent based, oil wax finishes)
- your preference for skirting or beading to be installed around the perimeter of the floor
- the facilitation of a suitable contractor to install and finish your floor

We will then help you through the process of delivery, installation and finishing. We don't consider our job is finished until our customers are living with their new floor.

The bosch timber floors promise

We are proud of our extensive history in timber flooring dating back to 1988.
